Peter Bauhuis

Where people live, there are also flies, they infect, fascinate, enervate, oscillate.

Inspired by a drawing from the 18th century, Peter Bauhuis has created a small swarm of flies, which now rises from his studio into the world. The first ones didn't have far to go from his studio and landed in large numbers in our gallery.

2020 was an extremely successful year for Peter Bauhuis in several respects, but the current situation also weighs heavily on him and so his successes remain largely hidden from the public.

We take this opportunity to congratulate the artist for the Danner Honorary Award and the nomination for the LOEWE Craftprice of the LOEWE Foundation, probably the largest prize for applied arts.

While Peter's works "Chains and Flowers" are waiting for visitors in the Pinakothek der Moderne and the exhibition of the LOEWE Prize nominees in Paris has been postponed indefinitely, we are already showing his newest project FLIES today as a kick-off for a worldwide invasion.

The exhibition is embedded in a compilation of scientific and cultural-historical scripts and is accompanied by a small little book.
